

Except Who They Are

When they are born and starting to grow they start crawling to find their feet When they are able and wanting to know you see their character starting to beet

It' now their innocents you have to protect you have to teach them wright from wrong It's their deference you have to project so they can learn to be bright and strong

In their youth you except who they are as it is them who are finding their way They don't want to be someone afar they want to feel needed with something to say

When it gets harder to climb the ladder that's when good mates can help you achieve They help you step up and be louder and they are always there for you to believe

Discrimination is not very nice for those who struggle in life They find it hard to roll the dice to not end up in strive

It is hard to live life with a mental illness you feel out of place for what they call normal All we want is respect and kindness to save our grace so we don't feel ad normal
